

Get Ready for Fall

In the Northmont Elementary School Garden

October is almost here and it is truly a special time for gardens in Southern California.

While most places wait until Spring to start planting up their gardens, we look forward to Fall, when the soil is warm and the air is cool.

With an earlier sowing season and virtually no frost, our gardens are blessed with almost year-round growing seasons right here in our own backyards!

If you would like to volunteer and would like help planning a garden box for your class please contact

Some Ideas for Our Garden

Produce

There really is nothing better than getting to enjoy the fruits of your labor while connecting with the cycles of the seasons

Butterfly Garden

Help support our pollinators by giving them an environment to thrive, and learn just how important your garden is for the ecosystem

Pet Worms!

Vermiculture is one of the best things for your garden! This is also an opportunity to learn that certain things, which may seem like trash, don't need to go to waste and can really be given back to support your garden and the earth!
